

Michael Dillon

Michael is a member of the Assistive Technology Programme team within DH Informatics Directorate (DHID), Technology Office.

The programme is providing central guidance and solutions to common informatics issues for trusts and communities that seek to implement effective, large scale telehealth services.

Michael leads the DHID engagement with the DH Whole System Demonstrator pilots and work to develop interoperability standards and guidance for sharing of information between telehealth applications and mainstream clinical records.